A MEDIEVAL CELEBRATION OF THE ‘VALIANT WOMAN’

1. ALBERTUS MAGNUS. Liber de muliere forti… [Cologne: Heinrich Quentell, 7 May 1499]. 4to. (160) ff. With a title-page printed at the end of the book (verso of z*). Early 17th century gilt-ruled Spanish calf with gilt ornaments at corners and on spine as well as faded armorial or emblem on center of both boards. All edges stained dark blue. $12,500

Editio princeps of this apocryphal text celebrating the Medieval ideal of the ‘strong’ or ‘valiant’ woman. Long attributed to Albertus Magnus, the present work has enjoyed a recent resurgence in interest thanks to modern scholarship focusing on women in medieval Christianity. In De Muliere Forti, various parts of a woman’s body (feet, hands, arms, loins, breast, womb, etc) are treated as symbolic of the virtues of the ‘valiant woman’; overall the text “show[s] readers how a male Dominican thought about gender and, in particular, women in the high Middle Ages” (Ashley & Holz, p. iii). We note just two copies in auction records of the last 20 years, the last (2014) making € 12.500.

WITH TWO HAND-COLORED, GILDED WOODCUTS

2. VORAGINE, Jacobus. Legende Sanctorum. Venice: Nikolaus of Frankfurt, 1516. 4to. (4), 276 ff. Elaborately gilt-tooled 17th century black calf with fan motifs in corners (probably a remboîtage); With a full-page woodcut, border, and initial colored and gilded by a contemporary hand, as well as ca. 75 small uncolored woodcuts in text. $3,500

Charming, early Venetian edition of the Golden Legend, brought out by one of the city’s first printers – the German-born Nikolaus von Frankfurt (ca. 1450-1524). The full-page, hand-colored woodcut found here depicts Christ at the breast of the Virgin Mary, with two angels in attendance; the facing borders show nine different saints including Augustine, Peter, and Jerome, each colored and with a delicately-applied gilt halo. Functioning as far more than a reference work, the Legende Sanctorum was an educational primer, teaching its reader the essentials of secular and church history in a basic style of Latin. Von Frankfurt was responsible for two printings of the present text, in 1512 and 1516. In North America, the 1516 edition is held at Toronto, Harvard, and the BPL; the 1512 edition is held at UCLA only.

ON MYSTERIOUS APPARITIONS OF THE CROSS,
IN ENGLAND, FRANCE, AND THE EAST AND WEST INDIES

Sole edition of this curious work by a Spanish Dominican resident in Rome, Alfonso Chacón (ca. 1540-1601). Partly astronomical, partly theological, and partly ethnographic, Chacón’s work is concerned not only with the crosses which appeared in the skies over England and France in 1591, but also with similar apparitions witnessed through the accounts of Jesuit missionaries to the East and West Indies, to whose reports Chacón evidently had access thanks to his positions as Apostolic Librarian to the Holy See. As noted on his title-page, he is most interested in contemporary accounts from England of mysterious celestial crosses, and pages 65-74 give a lengthy discussion of the astronomical phenomena seen over Norfolk on St George’s Day in 1591, including a full-page illustration with facing legend. OCLC shows just three copies in US libraries, at the Catholic University of America, Harvard, and the JCB.

THE ISLAMIC GOLDEN AGE BROUGHT TO AN END BY MONGOL CHRISTIANS
AN IMAGINATIVE RE-TELLING BY A SICILIAN POET

Extremely rare first edition, printed in Messina, of this Sicilian epic poem modelled on Torquato Tasso’s Jerusalem Delivered (1581). Errico (1592-1670) selects an unusual historical event for his subject matter: the bloodthirsty sack of Baghdad – capital of the Abbasid Caliphate – by the Mongols under Hulegu Khan, grandson of Genghis. According to legend, the Tigris ran red with the blood of the besieged civilians, while Baghdad’s mosques, palaces, and thirty-six public libraries were summarily sacked. The city’s fall in 1258 is thus generally seen as marking the end of the Islamic Golden Age. In Errico’s vivid re-imagining of the scene, however, the Abassids are identified as modern-day ‘Turks’ – and the Mongols (or ‘Tartars’) are revealed to have converted to Christianity, thus becoming noble Crusaders ridding Central Asia of the scourge of Islam. OCLC shows a single copy worldwide of this first edition (BNE); a second edition soon followed printed in Venice in 1624 (no US copy either).
AN UNUSUALLY FRANK DISCUSSION OF INFERTILITY
AND AN UNEXPECTED CONTRIBUTION TO THE
Querelle des Femmes

5. DE SERRES, Louis. Discours de la nature, causes, signes, & curature des empeschemens de la conception, & de la Sterilité des femmes. Mis en lumière en faveur des jeunes Dames, ausquelles Dieu ne donne point d’enfans ez premières année de leur mariage. Lyon: Antoine Chard: 1625. 8vo. (16), 486 pp. Modern richly-gilt red calf, valiantly attempting to imitate a period style. $3,850

Sole edition of this treatise addressed to a female readership concerning the inability to bear children. As it remains today, fertility was strongly tied to ideas of social and self-worth, and was generally assumed to be a disorder of women rather than men. De Serres (1588-ca. 1656) tackles both the medical and social aspects of fertility with remarkable frankness, even dedicating his treatise to a childless noblewoman still expected to produce an heir. “It was to Louis de Serres… to whom women owed the first great medical treatise in the vernacular on that which was frequently called the ‘monstrosity of nature’. In fact, the book is clearly composed to instruct a female readership, as Serres constantly addresses women, to whom he also dedicates a prefatory epistle… Going against popular opinion, he maintains that men can be responsible for sterility as well as women, but he responds to the more pressing need of women to be reassured in this regard…” (Valerie Worth-Stylianou, Les Traités d'obstétrique en langue française au seuil de la modernité). At the end of his work (p. 401), de Serres promises to devote a further treatise to male sterility – but this never appeared. OCLC shows six copies in US libraries, at the NLM, Chicago, Stanford, Minnesota, the College of Physicians of Philadelphia, and U Texas.

THE BIOGRAPHY OF A FETUS

Sole edition, and the fourth recorded copy, of this remarkable work placed on the Index less than a year after its publication. Novarini’s ‘Life of Mary in the Womb of St Anne’ was composed in the vernacular for the benefit of a community in nuns in Milan, to whom he addresses his preface. Treading on dubious theological ground, Novarini presents his own fantastic devotions based on the idea that Mary led an active and rich life while still ensconced in her mother’s womb; his musings perhaps also shed some intriguing light on early modern ideas of the fetus and its developmental states. Thus we find chapters concerning Mary’s fetal acts of prayer and adoration; examples of her obedience, and even her attempts to practice poverty while in the womb (Chapter XXXIX); as well as her emergence as a ‘terror e freno de’ demoni’ [terror of and bulwark against demons] while still in the fetal state. ICCU shows just one copy in Italian libraries, in Modena – hence the importance of the export license for this copy. OCLC adds just two further copies worldwide, at the Episcopal Library in Cologne and the BnF.

THE LIFE OF BLESSED CATHERINE OF GENOA,
BY A SPANISH ‘AFRICAN’

Second edition (with a cancel title-page for the first, dated 1646) of this biography of Catherine of Genoa (1447-1510), ostensibly the sole printed work of an early modern Spanish African, Tomas de Freitas (dates unknown). Peres suggests that Freitas was a “natural de alguna de las Colonias portuguesas de Africa”, which at the time would have included Angola, Mozambique, Guinea Bissau, São Tomé, Cabo Verde, and Madeira and the Azores. However, we suspect that our Freitas may have been the brother of Antonio de Freitas Africano – also known through a single printed work – who supposedly hailed from Tangier. A 1646 edition with an identical collation is not recorded by Palau, but does survive at the National Library of Portugal only. OCLC records the present 1647 edition in just two copies worldwide, at the BNE and the BnF; REBIUN adds no other copies, but PORBASE shows three holdings in Portuguese libraries.

ONE OF THE MOST ELABORATELY-ILLUSTRATED WORKS OF THE SICILIAN BAROQUE

Sole edition of this lavishly-illustrated work, the definitive treatment of the history of St Rosalia, patron saint of Palermo. Her cultus had been largely forgotten until, in the midst of the plague of 1624, her relics were discovered in a cave above the city. Thanks to her miraculous intercession, the disease was lifted; her fame subsequently spread partly thanks to the paintings of Van Dyck, who happened to be resident in Palermo during this period. Cascini’s work is also powerfully visual, aided by 21 richly-engraved plates further elaborating the novel iconography of this Sicilian hermit. OCLC shows a single US copy at Kansas (defective); no complete copy is recorded in Rare Book Hub. Offered with an export license.
PAINTED BY VELASQUEZ: THE MISSIONARY NUNS OF MANILA

9. LETONA, Bartholomé de. Perfecta Religiosa, Contiene Tres Libros. Libro I. De la Vida de la Madre Gerónima de la Asunción de la Orden de N. M. S. Clara, Fundadora, y primera Abadessa de las Descalzas de Manila en Filipinas… Puebla: Widow of Juan de Borja, 1662. 4to. (64), 390 pp, (14). Contemporary limp vellum. $6,500

Sole edition of one of the most remarkable biographical projects executed in early modern Puebla: a detailed account of the life and trans-Atlantic, trans-Pacific wanderings of Mother Jerónima de la Asunción (1555-1630), who departed from Toledo in the spring of 1620 to found the first Catholic monastery in Manila. Madre Jerónima’s departure from the port city of Seville earned her a canonical place in history thanks to her imposing portrait painted there by Velasquez, now at the Prado. Bartholomé de Letona had himself been resident in Manila between 1649-1654, during which time he was able to interview Jerónima’s disciples and compose the nucleus of the present work. In addition to describing their arduous journey by land across the Mexican isthmus from Veracruz to Acapulco, and the founding of the Clarissan convent in Manila in the 1620s, Letona’s text also reproduces many of Jerónima’s own poems. These were taken from her now-lost treatise to which Letona had access, the Carta de Marcar en el Mar del Mundo (Chart for Sailing on the Worldly Sea) modelled on Santa Teresa’s autobiographical Libro de la Vida. OCLC shows US copies at St Bonaventure, Berkeley, Indiana, Harvard, JCB, Texas, Yale, and Wisconsin (incomplete).

HOW TO BE AN ARCHIVIST

Sole edition of the regulations governing a new public institution erected on the orders of Ranuccio II Farnese, Grand Duke of Parma and Piacenza. Ranuccio’s ‘Public Archive’ would not be unrecognizable today: its purpose, as outlined in detail here, was to comprehensively preserve all documents of a public interest such as notarial deeds. Following an introduction outlining the aims of the institution, the Regole are divided into 9 chapters governing the duties of the Archivists and Clerks and the classification system to be used in the archive for ease of retrieval. OCLC shows US copies at the Newberry, Illinois, Yale, and U Florida.

CONJUGAL PLEASURES AND BURDENS:
A DIALOGUE BETWEEN MOTHER AND DAUGHTER

11. [ANONYMOUS]. Instruction sur le Mariage par Dialogue, d’une Mere à sa Fille... Lyon: Jean Certe, 1683. 8vo. (14), 437 pp, (1). Contemporary sheep. $950

Sole edition of this 17th century dialogue between a mother, Paule, and her daughter, Pauline, offering conjugal advice. Pages 149-164 concern “le commerce nuptial” or “communication sensuelle”, while Part IV (pp 329-427) concerns the ‘burdens of marriage’ including sterility, “vicious children”, poverty, intermarital strife, and jealousy. Other chapters concern “The duties of Masters towards their servants”; “The particular care which parents must take with respect to the modesty of their girls” (pp. 283-295); “In which ways a husband may govern his wife”; and so on. OCLC shows a single US copy, at Fordham.

SUMPTUOUSLY COLORED,
FOR AN AUSTRIAN NOBLEMAN AND HIS FAMILY

12. [CONFRATERNITY CERTIFICATE]. F. Bonaventura à Recineto Vicarius Generalis Ordinis FF. Minorum Sancti Francisci Capucinarum (licet im) salutem in Christo plurimam... Rome: [no printer], ca. 1680. Oblong folio [32.7 x 24.8 cm], entirely engraved and printed on paper. Meticulously hand-colored in a bright palette, presumably as issued, and with an oval embossed seal in lower frame (corresponding paper and wax on verso). Completed in manuscript for Johann Haas von Hochburg, his wife, and his children, dated Rome, 30th August 1684. Some loss to folds, professionally repaired. $950

Charming, brightly-colored certificate accepting the layman Baron Johann Hass von Hochburg (d. 1693), together with his wife and children, into the Confraternity of the Capuchin Order as a ‘spiritual child of the order’, meaning that he and his family would be permitted to attend all Holy Masses, prayers, vigils, penances, fasts, pilgrimages, and so on (according to the text). The engraved text, completed in manuscript for the recipient and signed by the Procurator-General of the Capuchin Order himself, Friar Bonaventura, is encircled by vignettes of the principal saints of the Franciscan Order, including St Francis himself in the upper left and St. Bonaventure in the upper right.

COMPOSED BY A MARANO POET FOR HIS JEWISH BENEFACTOR

Sole edition of this extravagant production by the Marano poet Manuel de León (ca. 1650-1715), intended to curry favor with the ruling Catholic elite in the Low Countries. The work was commissioned by León’s fellow Jew, the remarkable Moses Curiel (1620-1697), alias Jeronimo Nunes da Costa, a Sephardic diamond merchant who enjoyed close relations with the Portuguese court and acted as Agent of Dom Pedro II in the Netherlands. In 93 verses, León celebrates the nuptials of Pedro II and Maria Sofia Isabel in 1687, including approximately 120 pages describing bull-fights and approximately 40 pages describing fireworks. “In some cases, the works patronized by the Dutch Sephardi élite, though written by Sephardi authors, were essentially intended to boost their standing in the non-Jewish Spanish- and Portuguese-speaking world. This was the case, for example, with Manoel de León’s Triunfo Lusitano (1688)…” (Rapoport-Albert (ed.), Jewish History, p. 276). We can surmise that León’s talents went unappreciated, because his second published work – printed just three years later – was a eulogy of the Protestant William of Orange, suggesting that he had since joined the sizeable exodus of Jews from Spain and Portugal to the religiously-tolerant Netherlands in the late 17th century. Leon died in Amsterdam sometime after 1712.

WILLIAM III’S PLOT TO CONVERT TO ISLAM, REVEALED!

Very rare first or early edition of this polemical pamphlet, purporting to be an ‘intercepted’ official letter from Sultan Suleiman II encouraging William III of England to convert to Islam, and offering military support in return. Suleiman II (1642-1691) here implores William to “embrace the glorious, true, and infallible Law of the intimate friend of God, our great Prophet Muhammed”. Suleiman confirms that the center of their new empire will be Rome; and the “King of Vienna and the other Christian Princes will be counted among our Slaves”. In closing, the sultan eagerly awaits the news of William’s circumcision, and signs and dates his missive from Constantinople, in “the year of the Hegira of the Prophet, 1102” [i.e. 1690 CE]. OCLC shows copies of various editions at the BnF, Harry Ransom Center, and the Huntington only.

15. [BINDING / ILLUMINATION]. L’Office de la Sainte Vierge en Latin et en Francois, avec des Instructions pour passer chretiennement la journée… Dediée a Madame la Dauphine. Paris: Elie Josset, 1697. 4to. (24), 605 pp, (11), plus engr. frontispiece and 5 further engr. plates. All pages lightly ruled in red. Contemporary shagreen (shark or turtle-skin) with two clasps (one lacking); all edges gilt, gold silk pastedowns, and a variety of pink and green silk placeholders. $1,250

Based on our experience of similar examples, the binding as well as illumination were executed in a workshop specific to this genre of printed devotions for women, and this is a particularly fine specimen. Each engraving has been bordered in gilt, while each text page facing an engraving has been illuminated in a curious, alternating light blue-gilt style with gilt borders. All in all, a delightful production perhaps bound as such for a female courtier in the circle of the Dauphine. Shagreen – made from either turtle or sharkskin – enjoyed a brief vogue in the late 17th century, with consumers impressed by the skin’s toughness (being impervious to blades etc.); it is indeed almost perfectly-preserved in this case.

First edition of this treatise offered up by the Royal Engineer of the Saxon Elector Augustus the Strong. Schessler’s work ranges from problems of perspective to mirrors, mechanics, fortification engineering, and so on. The plates at pp. 44/5 and 48/9 depict a variety of engineering machines, while in the section on methods of measuring the globe, a curious world map at pages 52/3 centers on Africa and depicts ‘Terra Australis Incognita’ as bigger than all the other continents combined. On pp. 58-67 we find an entire chapter devoted to ‘Burning-Glasses’ and their practical construction, replete with technical illustrations; for example, on p. 65 Schessler instructs the reader in “How to construct a Burning-Glass which can ignite at a distance of 500 or 1000 feet (Schuch)”. OCLC shows US copies at the Getty, Boston Public Library, Smithsonian, Illinois, and U Penn. Not in Roberts & Trent (Bibliotheca Mechanica).
SPAIN’S FIRST PUBLIC LIBRARY
THE THIRD RECORDED COPY, NO COPY IN AUCTION RECORDS

17. DAUBENTON, Guillaume. Fundacion, y Estatutos de la Libreria Publica de el Rey N. Señor D. Phelipe V. Rey de España. Madrid: Francisco de el Hierro, 1716. 4to. 14 pp, [1 terminal blank]. Bound in tasteful modern blindstamped calf, tooled in gilt with gilt title on front cover. An excellent copy, clean and fresh. Offered with a recent export license. $4,000

Sole edition, impossibly rare, of the founding statutes of the Royal Library of Philip V, renamed in 1836 as the Biblioteca Nacional de España. Philip’s vision produced the first ‘public library’ in that country, unconnected to either a religious or educational institution and technically open to any reader who could procure a license (see statutes XI and XII). OCLC shows just two physical copies worldwide, at the BL and the BNE. REBUN reports no other copies in Spanish institutions. Minute directions are given for the duties of the Chief Librarian and his four Assistants (who must “take great care to ensure that the books are clean”); duplicates may be sold only by the Chief Librarian. The annual budget of the library is set at 8,000 pesos, derived from the taxation of tobacco and playing-cards; of this, 1,000 pesos goes towards the Chief Librarian’s salary, exactly ten times the salary of the lowest-paid employee.

IN A DELIGHTFUL RECUSANT BINDING

18. [ANONYMOUS]. Some Reflections upon the Prerogatives, Power and Protection, of St. Joseph... [London: no printer], 1722. 12mo. (24), 204 pp, [2 integral blanks], plus engr. frontispiece. Elaborately gilt-tooled contemporary black morocco, gilt dentelles with floral tooling, all edges gilt. Provenance: “Ann Widdrington, Her Book” on flyleaf (perhaps the widow of the Northumberland Catholic William Tempest Widdrington, d. 1753); passed in 1774 to Thomas Eyre (nephew of Widdrington’s brother Henry Francis, d. 1792), with his elaborate engr. bookplate on pastedown, bequeathing the book to the Inner Library of Hassop Hall (Derbyshire). $2,000

Very rare early edition (first, 1710) of this Recusant devotional manual centered on Joseph, husband of the Virgin Mary. The first edition of 1710 did not contain a plate, nor the preface found here. We assume the binding to date roughly to the book’s publication date, perhaps coinciding with its acquisition by Ann Widdrington. Stella Hall, near Newcastle, had long been the home of the Recusant Widdringtons, whose role in the Jacobite uprising of 1715 had seen them stripped of their titles. OCLC shows no physical copy of any edition printed before 1750 in US libraries, although we do not have the benefit of checking ESTC records to corroborate this. No copy of any edition is recorded in Rare Book Hub.

Please contact info@editioaltera.com for full-length descriptions and photos
Large-format woodblock depicting a relatively popular ‘scientific’ conceit in early modern emblemology: the ‘burning mirror’ envisioned by Archimedes, here adapted for Protestant devotional purposes into a reflection on divine “power from above”. The trope of the giant focal lens as emblem seems to have originated with the Jesuit Jan David’s Duodecim Specula, an early series of 12 mirror-based emblems engraved by Theodore Galle in 1610. It was repeated in a litany of later Catholic emblem books including Otto van Veen’s Amoris divini emblemata (1615); the Emblemata sacra of William Van Hees (1636); and the Devises et emblèmes of Daniel de la Feuille (1691). However, we have been unable to trace its emergence in Protestant emblem books – a much rarer genre – during the same period.

A REMARKABLE THEATRE OF HEROINES, INCLUDING NUMEROUS AMERICAN, AFRICAN, AND INDIAN FIGURES

20. DE FROES PERYM, Damiaõ. Teatro Heroino, Abecedario historico, e Catalogo das Mulheres Illustres em Armas, Letras, Acoes heroicas e Artes libera…. Tomo I [-II]. Lisbon: Thetonio Antunes Lima, 1736 [-1740]. Folios, 2 vols in 2. (30), 569 pp, (1); (20), 513 pp, (3), Contemporary sheep. $4,850

Sole edition of this splendidly-printed Abecedario celebrating the heroic deeds of hundreds of women, from the Greeks and Romans up to contemporary “heroinas Portuguezas… em Artes liberales, em letras, e mais em armas”. Among them we find Isabel Vaz, who fought in Morocco and was killed by the ‘moors’ in 1647; Maria de la Estrada, who accompanied her husband and Fernando Cortez into battle against the Aztecs; Maria de Sousa, who rebelled against the Dutch invasion in Pernambuco, northeastern Brazil; Rosa Maria de Sequeira, who fought in a sea battle against pirates off the coast of Salvador de Bahia in Brazil; and Maria Ursula d’Abreu e Lencaastro, born in Rio de Janeiro in 1682, who rose to the rank of corporal in the Portuguese army (disguised as a man named Balthazar do Conto Cardoso). Non-Europeans are equally praised for their heroism: Anna Fernandes, a native of Diu, India, who in the sieges of 1538 and 1546, helped to defeat the attacks of the Turks; Annaxinga, Princess of Angola, who negotiated an alliance with the Portuguese and then drove them out by allying herself to the Dutch; the Brazilian indigenous woman Clara Filipa Camarão (d. ca. 1650) of the Potiguara ethnic group, who was popularly supposed to have led battalions of indigenous warriors against the Dutch invaders in Olinda and Recife in the 1630s; and another indigenous Brazilian, Catarina Álvares Paraguacu (ca. 1503-1583), a Tupinambá woman from Bahia. OCLC shows US copies (presumably of complete sets) at NYPL, Berkeley, UCLA, Harvard, Indiana, Smith, Michigan, N Carolina, and BYU. Rare Book Hub records just one copy in auction records, sold at Sotheby’s in 1988.
A FANTE GRADUATE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF LEIDEN

21. BLEYSWYCK, Frans van. Jacobus Elisa Joannes Capitein, Africaansche Moor, Beroepen Predikant aan het Kasteel st. George op D’Elmina... Leyden: Abraham Kallewier, [ca. 1743]. Engraved broadside portrait, 37.5 x 24 cm [22.7 x 17 cm to platemarks].

Extremely rare, separately-issued portrait of the Protestant minister Jacobus Capitein (1717-1747), one of just two printed likenesses produced during his lifetime (no paintings seem to have survived). Born in the Gold Coast (present-day Ghana), Capitein was likely a member of the Fante ethnic group. As a child, he was sold to a Dutch ship’s captain – hence his Dutch moniker – and brought back to the Netherlands, where he was given a full course of education, graduating from the University of Leiden in 1742. Following his ordination he was dispatched as a missionary back to the Gold Coast where he died five years later. “Capitein was the most spectacular example of a black student in the Netherlands, a group whose number would not be really significant until the late twentieth century. His high visibility, in addition to contributing to the religious debate concerning the nature of blacks, also demonstrated conclusively his ability to master European language and rhetorical skills. His example was all the more welcomed because he trumpeted so well the popular chorus of the time condoning slavery…” (Blakely, Blacks in the Dutch World, p. 252). The British Museum holds only a later Augsburg copy of the present portrait. Not in the National Portrait Gallery (UK); not in the National Gallery of Art (US); not in the Metropolitan Museum of Art; not in the Art Institute of Chicago; not in the Getty.

“IT IS WOMEN WHO TEACH US TO THINK AND TO FEEL, AND THE PUBLIC CAN ONLY GAIN IMMENSELY, EVERY TIME THEY DESIRE TO EXPRESS THEIR THOUGHTS AND FEELINGS.” (p. viii)

First edition of this intriguing example of Enlightenment pedagogy. Gaillard’s noteworthy preface speaks of rescuing women from the “shameful prejudice, which confined [their] minds to the obscurity of their domestic affairs, and which pitilessly forbade them to have sophistication and intellectuality”. This attitude, he warns, risks plunging the country back into the dark ages of illiteracy – but is being countered by formidable female authors in the sciences, “disciples and rivals of the Maupertuis, Muschembroeks, Fontenelles, & Algarottis”, who are leading the charge “for the gain of society”. OCLC shows US copies at the BPL, Harvard, Michigan, Washington, Yale, and Duke. A second edition appeared in 1752, also rare.
A GUN CONTROL INITIATIVE IN BARCELONA

23. [GUN CONTROL] / GUZMAN, Jayme Miguel de. Desde que las Reales Armas de su Magestad… pacificaron felizmente este Principado, para establecer su quietud, prevenir la propension de muchos de sus Naturales a novedades perniciosas al estado, y bien publico, y evitar la facilidad de cometerse homicidios… se consider una de las providencias mas essenciales, la de recogerse, y prohibirse todo genero de Armas… Barcelona: [no printer], 1750. Folio [32.5 x 22 cm.]. (12) pp. Unbound; a worn copy, with some dampstaining and heavy creasing. $850

Second recorded copy of this edict confiscating and prohibiting “todo genero de Armas, asi de fuego, como de corte, y punta” [all manner of weapons, firearms as well as blades] in the Principality of Catalonia. The reasons given in the opening paragraph include the “to establish quietude [in the Principality], to prevent the propensity of many of its inhabitants to commit acts pernicious to the state, and to the public good, and to avoid the ease of committing homicides”. The text goes on to highlight exceptions to the new laws: persons still able to bear arms are law enforcement officers, members of the nobility, and employees of the Royal Palaces. All servants are prohibited from using swords without express permission, and are absolutely forbidden from carrying daggers. OCLC shows just one copy worldwide, at the University of Barcelona.

THE ‘PLAYTHING OF WOMEN’ WITH 56 HAND-COLORED ENGRAVINGS

Sole edition as such of this extraordinary work of eroticism, titled ‘The Plaything of Women’. Intended (according to the 20th century editor Apollinaire) for a female audience, the work explores – visually and textually – various titillating and romantic scenarios in a bawdy light. The more common ‘Londres’ editions of 1753 and 1758 were wholly unillustrated. There exists an undated engraved version without the ‘Nouvelles Gravures’, which proves to contain tame engravings of a pastoral nature (eg, a ship on the horizon to illustrate ‘The Chambermaid’; gothic ruins to illustrate ‘A Woman of Good Appetite’); and finally, there is the present, ‘X-Rated’ version which contains dozens of terrifically explicit vignettes: “Women who are [ridden] like donkeys”; “A Remedy for Hemorrhoids”; “On Women who Show Their Breasts”; etc. etc. OCLC shows no complete US copy of this edition: the UCLA copy contains just 46 leaves, and the Redwood Athenaeum copy just 54 leaves.
Sweeping Architectural Reforms for Paris, A Century Before Haussmann

Sole edition of this remarkable work describing in exceptional detail a proposed wholesale renovation of Paris including the Palais Royale, the Louvre, the Bibliothèque Mazarine, the city’s bridges and fountains, and every square, doorway, or quay the author can imagine. “This work is important for the history of Paris, particularly with regard to the plans for its physical and architectural evolution. [In it] he takes up ideas formulated by Voltaire and the architect Pierre Patte, concerning among others the Louvre, the city hall, theaters and cemeteries, and he highlights the need to build new bridges and above all to equip with quays the parts of the City and the two banks which are without them. Although these projects did not immediately come to fruition, his work inspired the program for the development of the Seine thirteen years later…” (Ader auction record, 2022, for a different copy)

Madame du Boccage Joins the Arcadians The Second Copy in America

Extremely rare sole edition of this printed souvenir commemorating the induction of Marie Anne Fiquet du Boccage (1710-1802) into the prestigious Accademia degli Arcadi in Rome in 1758, joining the ranks of Voltaire, Metastasio, and Cardinal Alessandro Albani. The contributors to the present volume – many of whom would have ‘recited’ their efforts at her induction – included the artist Luigi Subleyras, the novelist Pietro Chiari, Voltaire (who contributes an ode in French on p. 39), and an anonymous English poet who offers an ode on p. 41, “To the Fair Author of the Terrestrial Paradise”. On p. 17 we find a composition by the 17 year-old prodigy Giacinta Orsini Ludovisi; p. 10 contains a short sonnet celebrating each of the six female members of the Arcadi, with a corresponding ‘key’ to their pseudonyms on the facing page; and pp. 12-13 contain du Boccage’s own response (in French) to the warm welcome given by the Arcadians. OCLC shows copies only at the National Library of Rome and Stanford, but ICCU shows a handful of others in Italian libraries.

Unrecorded broadside, printed on silk in the Basque capital by Antonio de Egusquiza and incorporating an etched central vignette, decorative woodblocks, and letterpress with typographical ornaments. The work specifies in its imprint that it was defended verbally in the Sole edition, “a very important book, and very rare indeed” (Borba de Moraes), containing the earliest known work of the Afro-Brazilian poet Domingos Caldas Barbosa (ca. 1740-1800). Disparagingly nicknamed by his rivals as “Papagaio” [parrot], Barbosa was frequently referred to as “Caldas de Cobre” in order to distinguish him from his white contemporary Antonio Pereira de Souza Caldas. Aside from being his first printed work, the present text contains some of Barbosa’s only recorded references to his native America, in the two poems on that subject found on pp. 96-101. Around 1770, Barbosa had sailed to Portugal to pursue studies at the University of Coimbra, but “due to the unexpected death of his father, the mulatto from Rio was unable to pursue his education and faced many misfortunes in Portugal, including poverty, illness, and homelessness. Out of necessity he became a minstrel, or ‘griot,’ who used praise signing as a way to survive.” (Costigan). Barbosa was commissioned to compose at least 11 poems in the present volume; among the pieces attributed to him are a series of four odes, each representing Portuguese conquests in a different continent. As the son of a slave and a European, Barbosa is thus able to express his ties to Africa, Europe and America within a single framework.

THE FIRST PRINTED WORK OF AN AFRO-BRAZILIAN POET

“FOR THE RELIEF OF THE MISERY OCCASIONED BY PROMISCUOUS COMMERCE”

29. [ADVERTISING CARD / VENEREAL DISEASE]. MISERICORDIA instituted MDCCLXXIV. For the relief of the misery occasioned by promiscous [sic] Commerce. [London: no printer, ca. 1775-1783]. Small engraved advertisement on thick laid paper, 12 x 8 cm, including broad margins. $950

A delightful printed artefact of the short-lived Misericordia Hospital, an institution specifically dedicated to treating venereal disease among the poor. In the engraved vignette found on the present handbill, a man extends a helping hand towards a ‘fallen’ woman, pointing to the hospital with his other hand. Having opened its doors in East London in November of 1774, the hospital was closed down due to lack of funding in 1783. “It is clear that one of the signature elements of the penitentiary model at the Magdalen and Misericordia was the intense control of visitation. Penitent women had to be quarantined from the outside world as much as possible. Their reform hinged on an internal reformation, in which women must come to loath themselves, to detest how they had lived and, finally, to reject their former lifestyle completely…” (Kevin Siena, Permeable Walls: Historical Perspectives on Hospital and Asylum Visiting, pp. 190-191). Unrecorded in OCLC; not in the Wellcome, NLM, or BM.

ENGLAND BANKRUPTED BY AMERICA, FRANCE, AND SPAIN

30. [BROADSIDE]. Bold Jack! pray, what's the business to-day!… [Amsterdam, no printer, ca. 1780]. Engraved broadside, 29 x 25.5 cm to platemarks, overall 39 x 32.5 cm. Lettered with two columns of verse beneath the image, the left in English, the right in Dutch. $1,250

Sole edition of this curious broadside, depicting England’s financial ruin due to the American War of Independence. Jack balances precariously upon a carved wooden chest, representing the 'English Bank of Exchange', held aloft on the horn of a unicorn. Meanwhile, a dark-skinned child in a feathered headdress, representing the nascent United States of America, also tips the chest towards a group of bankrupts. The text warns that the Dutch are England’s only remaining friend and ally; the last five lines drive this message home in Dutch with particular reference to the toll that the American war was taking on British finances:

But dear Jack! Watch out: this stupidity will cost you dearly. Oh Boston! Delaware! Oh Washington! Oh the French!

OCLC shows US copies at Michigan, the Massachusetts Historical Society, and the Lewis Walpole Library (“Trimmed within plate line; damage with loss of design in lower right corner”).

career in the first half of her life, d’Eon’s world was turned upside down by the revelation in the 1770s that she might in fact be a woman. Here, the title-page respectfully refers to her as ‘Riddarinnan’, the feminine form of Riddaren, or ‘Chevalier’. This anonymously-translated life is based closely on the French original, but the engraving is non-derivative. While the French Vie (Paris, 1779) is a common book, well-described in the literature, d’Eon’s introduction to the Swedish public is extremely rare: OCLC shows just two copies worldwide, at the Swedish National Library and Harvard.

THE SECOND COPY IN AMERICA, THIS ONE PRINTED ON BLUE PAPER

Extremely rare first edition of this spirited attacked on the late 18th century best-seller Lo Scoglio dell’Humanità (“The Scourge of Humanity”, Venice, 1774). Dedicated to a local baroness, the preface suggests that the 46-year old Accademician ‘Africia Melpea’ feels compelled to join the fray; she signs her dedication to Giacinta Virginia Vernazza “vostra affezionatissima Amica, e Serva veta”, and comments that “I was told that [Chiaraviglio’s book] was derived from an impulse of jealousy, but for whatever reason it was composed, the truth is that this little book is a continuous slander of women, vituperative up to its last letter, and reprehensible, and I do not know how it was permitted to be printed” (p. VII); Sanival promises that she is taking revenge by reminding Chiaraviglio that there are “still women capable of sustaining reason”. OCLC shows just one copy of this first edition worldwide, at Berkeley (with no mention of blue paper) – but the ICCU adds four copies in Italian libraries (also with no mention of blue paper).
AN EARLY EXAMPLE OF A NORTHERN MEXICO PATENTE, FOR MARIA ANTONIA CORNEJO

33. [CONFRATERNITIES]. . . . Patente de la Cofradía. . . de esta Santa Iglesia Catedral de Durango con el Glorioso título del Acompañamiento del Sacratísimo Viático, bajo la Protección del Sagrado Corazón de Jesús. [Durango?: no printer, ca. 1790]. Large folio broadside [43 x 31 cm], completed in manuscript by Maria Antonia Cornejo on the 13 April, 1799, with further manuscript notes on verso. With three small woodcuts in upper border; typographical woodcut borders on all sides. $850

Extremely early example of Durango printing – if indeed it could be proved as such – and a large-format example of such ‘patentes’, which granted the bearer entry into the sort of informal religious orders which seem to have abounded in colonial Mexico. In return for fulfilling a few religious duties Maria was awarded a plenary indulgence as well as other dispensations enumerated in the right-hand column here. Finally, upon her death, the Cofradía would pay out for her funerary expenses, say a mass for her on every anniversary of her passing; its members would carry her coffin and even “cubriendo el Cadaver con el paño que tiene para este fin”. On the verso, we find manuscript confirmation that Maria had paid her dues for the year 1799; and a later note records that upon her death on the 19th March 1806, the Cofradía duly paid out 15 pesos “para ayudar del Funeral dela Hermana”.

THE SECOND COPY IN AMERICA BY AN EXECUTED FEMALE PUBLISHER

First edition, and an extremely rare survival. The publisher, Madame Lesclapart, took over her husband’s publishing business around 1790 and was executed by the Revolutionary government for the “distribution d’écrits contre-révolutionnaires” in 1794, aged 47. The present work is a collection of anecdotes, possibly intended for a female readership, and ‘edited’ by a ‘Society of Quailettes’, but likely composed – or at least edited – by Lesclapart herself. Almost all of the puns and jokes revolve around a hapless female character; the delightful frontispiece depicts a salon full of women engaged in lively conversation, presumably the ‘Society of Quailettes’ themselves, while the engraved title-page features a vignette of a fashionable glass-fronted bookshop – Madame Lesclapart’s own? As a testament to the rarity of the original, a reprint appeared ca. 1867 which is held by a handful of US institutions. OCLC shows a single copy of this first edition in US libraries, at Bryn Mawr.

CAREFREE BLACK ISLANDERS: SUBVERSIVE OR IDEALIZED?

35. BRUNIAS, Agostino (artist). A Cudgelling Match between English & French Negroes in the Island of Dominica. [London]: “Published April 20 1810, by Tho[ma]s Palser, Surry Side Westminster Bridge. [offered with]: A Negroes [sic] Dance in the Island of Dominica. Stipple engravings, 37 x 28 cm to platemarks, including particularly generous lateral margins. Overall sizes ca. 46.5 x 28 cm.

Rare, separately-issued engravings after the Italian painter Agostino Brunias (1730-1796), who spent most of his career in the West Indies. Strikingly absent from these depictions is any sign of slavery, past or present; instead, the Black subjects (of varying skin tones) are happily engaged in leisure activities including dancing, drumming, drinking, playing the tambourine, and chatting. Brunias’ images were first issued as engravings in 1779, and their re-appearance here at the press of Thomas Palser some 30 years later attests to the enduring popularity of these uniquely ‘ethnographic’ images capturing the daily life of the enslaved Black inhabitants of Dominica during the late 18th century. The JCB holds both images in their 1779 printings only, but A Negroes Dance is badly torn with loss; the Lewis Walpole Library holds only A Negroes Dance (1779), as does the Yale Center for British Art.

“THE MOST NOTORIOUS LESBIAN OF HER DAY”

Second recorded complete copy of this defense of the notoriously bisexual actress Françoise Marie Antoinette Clairien Saucerotte, called ‘Mademoiselle Raucourt’ (1756-1815). The Harvard copy is lacking its frontispiece, and bears a mistaken attribution to ‘François Clairien Raucourt’, a corruption of the actress’ own name. Instead, it seems highly probably that the anonymous author of the present work was Raucourt’s last partner, Henriette Simonnot-Ponty, with whom she lived until her death. “Her funeral was the occasion of a riot. The clergy of her parish having refused to receive the body, the crowd broke in the church doors, and were only restrained from further violence by the arrival of an almoner sent post-haste by Louis XVIII” (Encyclopedia Britannica). OCLC shows only the BnF and Harvard (defective).
An Early Monograph on Menopause

Extremely rare early edition of this treatise on menopause, here augmented by additional discussions of menstrual disorders. The author’s preface suggests that the first edition had appeared only in August of 1828, and was gobbled up within a few months thanks to the importance of its subject matter. Noting that women are ashamed to speak of their menses without “repugnance”, thanks to their natural modesty, the 23-year old Saucerotte composed his manual to instruct this population, so that they can avoid the embarrassment of an in-person consultation. Wilbush (1979) notes that in the 18th century menopause began to be treated as a disease or disorder, culminating with the coining of the term “la ménopause” in 1812. “While the English physician John Fothergill was the first to author an article on the cessation of menses, it was French doctors who invented the word la ménopause, and who elaborated it profusely throughout the nineteenth century, while other medical cultures remained largely silent on the matter until the early twentieth century.” (Moore, “The French Elaboration of Ideas about Menopause”). Of all early editions, OCLC shows just two in US libraries, at Duke and Harvard.

A Radical Textbook for Newly-independent Latin Americans

38. OCHOA, Juan Eugenio de. Manual del Abogado Americano... Corregido y mejorado por una Sociedad de Amigos. Arequipa: P. Benavides, 1830. 2 vols in 2, 8vos. (4), 302 pp, (5); (2), 325 pp, (5). Contemporary calf. $3,500

Rare first American edition of this remarkable legal textbook composed specifically for use in the fledgling independent republics of Latin America during the first half of the 19th century. Little seems to be known of the author, but in his preface to the first edition, Ochoa rails against “political and religious despotism” and salutes “the individuals of all classes in these new republics who have risen as if by magic from the bosom of shame, seeing themselves elevated to the dignity of free men”. The text’s Arequipan editors have added numerous footnotes commenting on Ochoa’s original precepts and adding observations specific to Peruvian law. OCLC shows just seven copies worldwide, four of them in the US (Yale, GW Law, LC, and Harvard).
AN EXTREMELY RARE ENGLISH-LANGUAGE BRAZILIAN IMPRINT

Very rare sole Brazilian-printed edition of this complete guide for merchants at the port of Rio de Janeiro following the country’s declaration of independence in 1822. First printed in Baltimore in 1828, Maxwell, Wright & Co’s publication was evidently aimed at ship captains responsible for supplying goods to Brazil’s main port. The present edition is the only one printed in Rio de Janeiro, placing it among a very small handful of English-language Brazilian imprints before 1850. “Like other Anglo-American merchant firms, [Maxwell Wright & Co.] got its start in Brazil by providing Luso-Brazilian slave traders with vessels, but it appears to have jettisoned that business for coffee and flour produced by slaves.” (Rood, The Reinvention of Atlantic Slavery: Technology, Labor, Race, and Capitalism, pp. 243-4). A sample ship’s manifest found here provides an instructive example of what a single ship might be expected to bring as cargo during this period. OCLC shows copies of this Rio de Janeiro edition at Stanford, the Boston Athenaeum, Temple, U Texas, the Virginia Historical Society, and the State Library of Massachusetts. In contrast, the Baltimore-printed editions are relatively common in census.

A PROFESSIONAL FORTUNE-TELLER REVEALS ALL THE THIRD RECORDED COPY

40. LEGRAND, “Madame J.”. La Cartomancie Dévoilée, Simplifiée et Perfectionnée, ouvrage unique, aussi instructif qu’amusant, mis à la hauteur des découvertes du siècle a la portée de toute personne sachant lire… Brussels: “chez l’Auteur”, 1840. Oblong 8vo. (2), xvi pp, 17-158 pp, [1 terminal blank], plus lithogr. portrait of the author. With 136 pages of woodcut illustrations depicting various card arrangements (of which the first 8 have been colored by an early hand). Contemporary half calf over marbled boards. $1,650

Sole edition, impossibly rare, of this charming guide to fortune-telling based on playing cards. The only other copy noted in OCLC is at the University of Amsterdam, and few traces seem to exist of Madame Legrand or her Cartomancie in any bibliographical source. Following her informative preface, the questions answered by Legrand’s system are the immortal concerns of fortune-tellers through the ages: “Can I find a better job than what I have now?”, “Will my business be successful?”, “Is he interested in me as a friend or as something more?”, “I’m waiting for lots of money – will I ever receive it?”, “Will I have success in the lottery?” etc. etc.

“THE FIRST ORIGINAL MEXICAN COOKBOOK” – LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

41. [BLANQUEL, Simón]. Novísimo Arte de Cocina, ó Escelente Coleccion de las Mejores Recetas… para sazonar al estilo de nuestro pais… Lleva añadido lo mas selecto que se encuentra acerca de repostería, el arte de trinchar &c., con dos estampas que aclaran mas este último tratadito. Mexico: Manuel N. de la Vega, 1845. 8vo. 312 pp, plus 2 engr. plates Contemporary calf. $1,850

Very rare second edition of this celebrated landmark in the history of Mexican cuisine. “Simon Blanquel’s important early Mexican cookbook… was first printed in 1831 and stands as the first original Mexican cookbook printed in Mexico.” (Library of Congress, describing this edition of 1845). As the title-page makes clear, the work was intended for the chef operating “al menor costo posible”, and incorporates recipes from Spanish, French, Italian, and English sources while providing methods “para sazonar al estilo de nuestro pais”. Blanquel provides hundreds of recipes for all manner of dishes, ranging from meats, moles, albóndigas, pastries, and vegetables, to chocolate, candies (cajetas, dulces finos), jaleas, buñuelos, and so on. The two plates (re-engraved versus the 1831 edition) depict various cuts of meat, how to prepare pollo asado, trout, and a fish called rombo. According to Pilcher (Food and the Making of Mexican Identity, p. 26), the present text contains the first printed recipe for mole; we also find stuffed avocados (aguacates rellenos) on p. 32 and quesadillas on p. 91. While the first edition is a little more common in census, this second edition is held in US libraries at UCSD, LC, Duke, and Indiana only.

THE PARALYZED SOLDIER AND HIS DAUGHTER: A TALE FOR FRENCH CHILDREN

42. [LEBASSU, Joséphine]. La Fille du Paralytique, ou la Maisonnette de la Forêt. Limoges: Brothers Barbou, 1853. 12mo. (9), 10-177 pp, (3), plus engr. frontispiece Original publisher’s embossed green pasteboards. $550

Extremely rare children’s tale revolving around a paralyzed French ex-soldier and his dutiful daughter, both pictured in the engraved frontispiece. Conflicts such as the Napoleonic Wars had seen a large influx of wounded soldiers returning from the front, and here it is suggested that ‘Daubigny’ had served his country for 15 years before his service took its toll on his body. At a tender age, his daughter Virginie loses her mother to illness, and the two survivors attempt to forge a living in a small house in the forest. Little seems to be known of the suggested author, Joséphine Lebassu (ca. 1800-1850) – who is otherwise celebrated for her novel La St.-Simonienne (1833), seen as a monument of French feminism. According to OCLC, the present work is unrecorded in any printing outside of the National Library of France.

“THIS BOOK MUST NOT BE OFFERED FOR SALE OR SHOWN IN PUBLIC PLACES”

THE BISEXUAL LITERATURE OF THE ITALIAN RENAISSANCE

Extremely rare first vernacular translation of this collection of poems utterly unmatched in its explicit discussion of gay sex during the Renaissance. Aside from a heavily-censored edition curated by Antonio Magliabechi in 1691, this is the first appearance of Massimi’s uncensored poems in print since 1523, and the first attempt at a vernacular translation of them. The translation and editing of the 1885 Hecatelegium was undertaken by the shadowy publisher Antoine-Isidore Liseux (1835-1894) – whose existence as a real person was at one point doubted, although a 2009 monograph confirms the details of his life. It was printed, in Liseux’s elegant typographical style, in a limited edition of 120 copies, of which this is numbered #70; due to a recent censorship law, it was not allowed “to be offered for sale to the public, or to be shown in public places”, as per the front wrapper. OCLC shows fewer than a dozen surviving copies worldwide, with five in the US: Cal State Northridge, UC Riverside, Yale, Duke, and U Penn. $1,250

A COLONIAL PROPOSAL FOR THE ‘EMIGRATION’ OF SUB-SAHARAN SLAVES INTO ALGERIA

Second, greatly enlarged edition (first, 1859) of this robust defense of slavery, penned by an Algerian colonial administrator and printed in the coastal town of Blida. Inspired by the example of the American South (discussed eg on pp. 103-5), Chancel’s vision sees the French state itself become a major player in an informal system of enforced labor: ‘freed’ slaves will be rewarded with Christianization and the civilizing influence of white society. In passing, Chancel notes that his benign system will result in a mere 24% mortality rate among the laborers over the course of 12 years, versus the 36% mortality rate observed among slaves in the English Antilles. Thanks to this attrition of a quarter of the workforce, it is calculated that after 10 or 12 years of such indenture, a repatriation tax would be able supply 1,690 francs for the repatriation of each male slave – 700 francs for his travel, 600 francs as pocket money, and 390 francs for goods to accompany him (pp. 107-109). OCLC shows US copies at Harvard, Michigan State, NYPL, Trinity College (CT), and the NY Historical Society.
“THE IDEA THAT ASIA WOULD DO TO WHITE AUSTRALIA WHAT WHITE AUSTRALIA HAD DONE TO THE INDIGENOUS POPULATION WAS A CENTRAL THEME…” (WALKER)

First edition of this curious work of Australian science-fiction, helpfully classified as a ‘Near Future Yellow Peril’ by the online Science Fiction Encyclopedia. Set in 1913 following a global takeover by the Japanese (other ‘races’ are also vaguely implicated), the narrative is told from the point of view of Frank Danton, apparently the last free white man in the world. David Walker (Yellow Perils: China Narratives in the Contemporary World) gives a good summary of the contents: “In the language of the day, just as ‘white’ had dispossessed ‘black,’ so too would ‘yellow’ replace ‘white’… Despite Danton’s bravado, the Japanese invade an unprepared Australia. They soon establish ‘Fair Lily Colonies’ where the comeliest European women, including the unlucky Mabel, are forced to cohabit with Japanese. As the last surviving white man (echoing the theme of the dying tribes of Aboriginal Australia), Danton is left to write the story of the conquest of white Australia. It was common in invasion narratives to impute both a sexual and a territorial motivation to the Asian invader… The invasion genre opened the way to an exploration of taboo subjects, including interracial sex and the new freedoms created by city living.” OCLC shows a handful of copies in Australian libraries as well as US copies at UCLA and Wisconsin.
